

International Collotype Competition
HARIBAN AWARD 2024

[OPEN CALL | Guidelines]

1. ABOUT HARIBAN AWARD

Presented by Benrido, the Hariban Award combines a 170-year-old analogue technique with contemporary photography. The award was launched in 2014 with the aim of introducing artists and photographers to collotype, an alternative photographic process. Glass plates have been used as collotype printing plates, which is why the award is called “Hariban” because “Hari” means glass plate, and “ban” means printing plate in Japanese. This Award invites professionals and amateurs alike to submit black and white photographs for a chance to win. The winners are carefully selected by a jury of international curators, publishers and artists in the field of photography. The Grand Prize Winner will be invited to a two-week residency in Kyoto, Japan, to collaborate with the master printers of Benrido.

2. BENRIDO & COLLOTYPE

Founded in 1887, Benrido opened its collotype atelier in 1905 and has specialised in the collotype printing technique for over 120 years. Today, collotype studios are rare in the world, but Benrido continues to produce fine colour collotype prints and works to pass the technique on to the next generation.

Collotype is an alternative printing process that was invented in 1855 by the French engineer Alphonse Poitevin as a method of photographic fine art printing. Photographic prints of the 19th century had poor image preservability and gradually faded and discoloured over time. To compensate for this, various printing methods using pigments were devised; one of the established techniques among them was collotype. Not only did it offer a high degree of preservation, but it also made it possible to produce a large number of prints as printmaking once the printing plate is pigmented. Collotype was put into practice by Joseph Albert in Germany and then widely used throughout the world, later being introduced to Japan from the USA.

FAQ

Q. Can I submit more than 12 photos by completing more than one entry form?

A. No. Each artist is limited to one entry.

Q. Should I submit twelve photos from one series, or can I include work from a variety of projects?

A. The selection of photos is entirely yours, however, in our opinion, a coherent series generally makes a stronger impression.

Q: Can works generated and created using Artificial Intelligence (AI) be submitted?

A: Yes. However, the copyright and all rights to the images used by the AI to generate the images have to be owned by the applicant.

Q: We create as a group. Can we apply?

A: Yes, one of you should apply as a representative of the group. However, if your group wins the Grand Prize, we can only cover the travel and accommodation costs for one person only.

Q. May I submit photos depicting nudity or other controversial subjects?

A. We will gladly accept any images that are not blatantly exploitative or overtly offensive.

Q. Will you accept analogue submissions such as slides?

A. Unfortunately, we are only able to accept digital images submitted using our online form. (All submissions must be made digitally regardless of whether shot on analogue or digital).

Q. What are the details of the winner's trip to Kyoto?

A. The recipient of the Hariban Award 2024 will receive an expenses-paid trip to Kyoto for two weeks from October 2024 to work with the Benrido printers. The prints will be exhibited in the winner's solo exhibition in 2025.

* For the exhibition, the artist will be responsible for their own travel expenses to attend the exhibition.

* The exact date for the exhibition is to be announced once the residency is completed.
